

Please rescind this ruling. As a Realtor, we send faxes out everyday to people who request us to send faxes to them. If they are requesting the information, then that should be the same as them giving us their consent without having to have a "consent form" filled out first. I do think that businesses who send out unsolicited emails for vacations and supplies, etc. should be required to have consent forms, but not those who send out faxes by request or as normal business procedure.
